Q: Are the rumors true about that guy who thinks he's Bob Denver (Weekly World News Feb. 18, 2003)? We hear his wife just filed for divorce.
— Marge and Bill T., Laguna Beach, Calif.

A: It's true, says Barbi Bilcock, sadly admitting she finally gave up on loony hubby Abbott Bilcock. He had awakened from a head injury thinking he was actor Bob Denver, and began dressing and acting like Denver's famous characters from the TV shows Gilligan's Island and The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis. "One good thing is, they told me he sort of prevented an escape," Barbi reveals. "Abbott managed to steal an ambulance by some inmates to drive away in, but when they got in it they realized he'd left the headlights on and it drained the battery so they all got caught."

Q: How's that guy who escaped from prison and then turned(e) back in (July 2, 2002)?
— Annette Q., Anchorage, Alaska

A: Argentine prison sources say Carlos Incarcia has been a model inmate — except for his attack on a guard in the laundry room, which cost him his parole. Incarcia had stunned the world when he dug out of the penitentiary and then turned back in, terrified of his wife, mother and members of his old gang. "It was weird," says a source in the warden's office. "He was actually up for parole because he'd come back to prison on his own, and because he'd been behaving himself. Then, two days before his parole hearing, he just pumps this guard. It's almost like he was trying to blow it for himself."

Q: I'd like to donate to that group that helps rich people deal with the bad economy (March 18, 2002). Do you have an address?
— Al B., Shaker Heights, Ohio

A: Help for Displaced Lifestyles has disbanded, says founder Martha Wentworth. She had planned to offer financial aid and life skills counseling to super-rich clients rendered merely rich by the downturn in the economy. "With all these tax cuts that Congress is talking about," she grins, "my people will be back on their feet in no time."

GOOD NEWS FOR SMOKERS!

New vitamin cigarettes will add years to your life!

A PACK a day will keep the doctor away, say experts.

SPODSBJERG, Denmark — A Danish horticulturalist turned cigarette manufacturer has become the toast of European tobacco users by creating the ultimate safe smoke — a healthy cigarette loaded with essential vitamins and nutrients!

One full pack of "Vigor" cigarettes smoked within a 24-hour time frame will provide 100 percent of a person's daily requirement of vitamins A, B, C, D and E, according to the celebrated inventor.

"It is with much pride and joy that I announce the arrival of the world's first 'health cigarette,'" says Dr. Dagmar Tekla, CEO of Tekla Tobacco Inc. who also chairs the esteemed Spodsbjerg Horticultural Society.

"For the first time in history, smokers who switch to the Vigor brand will outlive conventional cigarette smokers and non-smokers by several decades."

compound for several weeks before planting them, hoping for a larger, more robust crop. The result was a hybrid strain rich in vitamins and minerals previously unknown to conventional tobacco.

"When the first cigarettes rolled off the line, our test smokers swore that after a few puffs, they began to feel energized and refreshed. We sent a sample to our on-site laboratory and sure enough, it was loaded with every good thing that one could ever hope to put into their body."

To further bolster Vigor's claim that it has smokers' best interests in mind, the cigarettes are manufactured nicotine-free.

"People should smoke Vigor because they want to, not because they have to," says Dr. Tekla. "For this reason, the highly addictive nicotine has been removed from the Vigor brand."

Lyle Bennett, a Brisbane, Australia boat builder whose rectal cancer was miraculously cured by cigarette smoking — as reported in the August 30, 2002 edition of Weekly World News — has permanently switched to Vigor, and encourages others to do the same.

"When I smoke Vigor, I know that my body is receiving 140 percent of the essential vitamins and minerals I need to live a long, healthy life," beams Bennett.

"Vigor will ensure my longevity. What more could a smoker ask for?"

Vigor cigarettes are available in regular, menthol and lights, and are currently being test-marketed in Europe and Australia on a limited basis.

FDA approval of Vigor is expected in 2003.

Family pet cooked to death at groomers

HOLLYWOOD — A trip to the salon turned to tragedy for one poor pooch who was cooked to death!

Victor Rambeff dropped off his two dogs, Harry and Sam, at the D'Wash Doggie salon in West Hollywood for their regular wash and dry, and was stunned to receive a call a short time later that Harry was deceased.

Harry died due to being left in a drier for over 20 minutes at a temperature that reached a scorching 90 degrees Fahrenheit.

After finding the hapless Harry, salon employees rushed him to a local veterinarian but it was too late.

"The owner understands we didn't do this thing on purpose. It was a fluke.

"We did everything right. The dogs were neither left unattended nor in the machines for long. The driers were set at the proper temperature," said salon owner Jeff Lee.

Rambeff, who thinks Harry died from dehydration, disagrees.

Dogs cool themselves by panting, but this became very difficult for Harry with the hot air blowing on him in the cage.

Authorities are conducting an autopsy to officially determine the cause of the dog's death but police doubt the death broke any laws.

"Sam wanders around the house looking for Harry. It feels like

Satan and Saddam were partners – and this picture proved it!

Dear Editor,

I saw your picture of Satan's face over Baghdad (Weekly World News April 29, 2003) and it scared the hell out of me!

That picture proves that the devil was influencing Saddam Hussein. Hopefully Saddam was killed in the bombing of Baghdad and has gone straight to hell where he belongs.

You're right, Agatha — that picture certainly does indicate a demonic presence in Iraq. Let's hope the U.S. troops are able to drive all the devils out of Baghdad!

Dear Editor,

I've read your most interesting story about Lady Liberty crying real tears. I'd like to make a suggestion about how you can find out why she's crying. You should have a paranormal expert who can talk with inanimate objects talk to Lady Liberty and then right away give us her answers.

Personally, I think maybe she's homesick and longs to be shipped back to France, her homeland. Or maybe she's sad over the war in Iraq, the 9-11 tragedy, etc.

Peter G.

Those are interesting theories, Peter. The Statue has stopped crying lately, so if the war upset her, the war in Iraq, she must be happy now. In fact, some report they've even heard her singing!

'KULPA'S KOLUMN' FROM THE EDITOR

TV War junkies got a great look at America's impressive Humvee military vehicle in Iraq, and I, for one, was proud to see how well it performed.

I was riding high in that vehicle, officially named "HMMWV," or "High Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicle," long before the army acquired it. That's because, way back in 1984, I served a brief stint in Mishawaka, Ind., as a draftsman working for the "Hummer project," as we called it back then. My father had been heavily involved for years in the design/manufacture of the Humvee, and brought me in as an assistant contractor.

The Humvee

What makes the military Humvee so cool is its incredible array of interchangeable armaments, from machine guns to TOW missiles, as well as its amazing adaptability. One day it's a troop carrier, the next, it's an anti-tank platform, similar in principle to the robotic Transformers in toy stores.

I had a few ideas for this machine that didn't fly. Wings did not work with the Humvee, and it failed miserably as a submarine. Needless to say, that last test got me sent back to the salt mines. But hey — maybe some day!

SHOCK & AWE SEX!

How to use U.S. military tactics to win in bed

By MIKE FOSTER/World News Service

You can achieve total victory in bed — by adopting the same approach the U.S. military has used to vanquish America's enemies in Operation Iraqi Freedom, a top sexpert says.

"Philosophers have been making the analogy between war and love for hundreds of years and the fact is, many of the same rules apply," notes famed British sex guru Dr Dana Hunley.

"Anyone interested in satisfying his or her lover can learn a lot from the way Coalition forces penetrated deep into enemy territory and have rapidly brought this conflict to a climax."

Here are some of the ways you can apply America's winning battlefield tactics to your next bedroom encounter:

● Be prepared — Remember, before our armed forces went into battle, the Pentagon spent months planning. "Don't wait until you get into bed to start coming up with your plan of attack — think it through in advance, running various scenarios through your mind," suggests Dr Hunley.

"It's also key to be in adequate physical shape. Just as Coalition soldiers trained hard to develop the stamina needed to fight a desert war, get plenty of exercise in the days leading up to an important sexual encounter."

YOUR PARTNER will be shocked and awed when you surprise him or her by using U.S. battle tactics in the bedroom.

● Show confidence — Before the invasion, U.S. military commanders talked about what would happen when we won the war — not if. "Nothing is sexier than a confident partner," observes Dr Hunley.

● Use the element of surprise — A bold, unexpected move early on can catch your partner off guard. "If he or she is expecting the same old thing before intercourse, for instance, surprise your partner by licking their navel or another overlooked erogenous zone instead," the expert says.

● Have a backup plan — Always remember, your initial attempt to please your lover may not work. "Regroup, try another tactic and act like that's what you planned to do all along."

● Try a two-pronged approach — Remember the Coalition's simultaneous invasion from the South and the North? Your partner has more than one vulnerable area too, says Dr. Hunley. "Don't put all your effort into just one region of the body. While your main focus can be in one location, your hands can be invading another location."

● Don't give up — "If for any reason your initial attempt proves unsuccessful, keep trying," says Dr Hunley. "Just as the U.S forces persevered on, so should you. A good soldier carries on until the battle is won."

Scientists will try to revive

By AHMET FARUK and MIKE FOSTER
Weekly World News

WAKEHAM BAY, Canada — A team of explorers studying glacial formations stumbled upon one of the greatest archaeological discoveries of the new millennium — a ninth-century Viking warrior encased in a thick wall of ice and showing no visible sign of decomposition!

More incredibly still, researchers believe it may be possible to revive him!

"What we are about to attempt has never been tried before, but we firmly believe that with the technology available today, it will be possible to bring this man back to life with his mental faculties fully intact," declares lead scientist Dr. Nigel Hamm.

"The unique manner in which this Viking sailor has been preserved affords us an opportunity to conduct an extraordinary scientific experiment."

The frozen Norseman, who appears to have been about 25 years old when he died, was discovered inside a glacial cavern, 22 feet below the Earth's surface.

"I am still in a daze over this very amazing find," declares Dr. Hamm, head of a London-based geological society stationed in Greenland that specializes in Arctic study. "He's probably been there for the better part of 1,200 years, but looks like he could have died 20 minutes ago."

The bearded warrior is dressed appropriately for the frigid climate, wearing clothes and boots lashioned from thick fur.

He also sports a typical Viking horned cap and leather breast plate. A leather pouch strapped around his waste bulges outward suggesting it is full.

"At first we believed that it contained good-luck trinkets from home or perhaps some caribou jerky for the journey ahead," Dr. Hamm says.

"But after consulting experts in Viking lore, we now believe that the man was probably carrying what people of his land believed were magic charms that could keep death at bay.

"Incredibly, they seem to have worked, because this Viking is in tip-top shape.

"It's uncanny — it's like he's more in a state of suspended animation than truly dead."

It's believed that the short, stocky Norseman was a member of a Viking expedition who'd been sent from the ship on a hunting mission.

"Probably a snow bridge he was walking on gave way and he tumbled through a crevasse into the cavern," the researcher says.

Viking artifacts have been found throughout Northern and Eastern Canada over the years. It is believed the Vikings used the frozen north as a winter base.

The Viking was discovered by the team's only female member, Dr. Daphne Meadows, who was conducting chemical tests in the cave.

"I was wandering through the cave, and I got separated from the other members of the team," recalls Dr. Meadows.

"I had the strangest feeling that I was being watched as I was scraping samples off the cavern wall — and when I looked behind me there he was."

Dr Meadows' screams alerted the rest of the team, who rushed to her aid.

"We were worried that Dr Meadows had been hurt," explains Dr Hamm. "You can imagine our relief when we saw that not only was she healthy, but she had made an amazing discovery as well."

DR. HAMM

Plans are underway for the Viking, still encased in a block of ice, to be transported to London, where the attempt to revive him will be conducted at a cryonics research center in two weeks.

There, doctors say he will be gradually thawed out over a period of hours and then resuscitated using a high-tech version of the defibrillator employed in hospital emergency rooms to jump-start hearts.

If the experiment succeeds, experts say there's no limit to what we might learn from speaking to a genuine Viking who lived centuries ago.

"We'll have to re-write the history of the Nordic explorers," says Dr Hamm.

"What's more, he may be able to tell us what he knows about the ancient Norse magic that helped to preserve him. It could revolutionize medicine as we know it."

POOCH 'CURES' OWNER'S ILLNESS!

LONDON — A Siberian husky is credited with saving the life of her mistress, by helping her overcome a life-threatening eating disorder!

The inspiring story earned the pooch a Golden Bonio Award, making faithful friend Rio the top dog in England.

He beat 11 other dogs for the Golden Bonio, which is bestowed by a pet-food company and carries a prize of $1,500.

Michelle Smart, 21, had a serious case of anorexia nervosa — the eating disorder usually suffered by young women, who intentionally starve themselves. Smart's weight had plummeted to a mere 91 pounds, and doctors gave her just three months to live.

"I wasn't bothered," says Smart, a child care worker.

Then her parents told her they'd give her a Siberian husky — a dog she'd wanted since childhood — if she'd just start eating and try to gain weight. The plan worked.

"It was hard," Michelle says, "because I had to wait until she was eight weeks old." But when Rio came home, she started realizing she'd have to build up her energy to care for the puppy. And that meant eating, finally.

The real separation came when Rio herself stopped eating for a while.

"She lost a lot of weight," Michelle says, "and that made me realize what I had been doing. The worry I was having over her was what my parents were going through."

Pet owner John Mallett knew there was something wrong with Jake — his Staffordshire bull terrier mix — but could not figure out what it was.

"He was being sick and yelping loudly," remembers Mallett who took Jake to the People's Dispensary for Sick Animals where an x-ray revealed why the dog was yelping.

The puppy had gulped down a 7-inch kitchen knife handle first.

Goofy bird axed for eating spectator's toupee!

REDMOR, England — A performing hawk's act has been ruffled, after a series of embarrassing incidents that got his handlers in hot water.

In the last few years, Harry the hawk has stolen a spectator's toupee and tried to eat it; purloined an inflated "beware hawk" attraction for children; and crash-landed in some ice cream being sold by a vendor.

Owner Tom Graham says Harry, a Harris hawk, will retire from showbiz and start breeding instead.

Graham says the problems started during a show several years ago. Graham would toss a piece of bread far into an audience, and Harry perched in a man's hair — which turned out to be a toupee, Graham says.

"When he took off, he still had the toupee in his foot," Graham says. "Then he tried to eat it."

In previous years embarrassments, Graham says, he created parking fines as Harry swallowed parking tickets. But now the

He says Mondays are also characterized by an increase in on-the-job heart attacks.

Here are 20 great tips from Dr. Butterworth, to get you sailing instead of slumping into work.

● Take a look at how you spend your weekend. If you're exhausted after two days off, schedule more leisure time for Saturday and Sunday.

● Exercise on weekends, especially if your job involves physical labor. Working out will help keep your muscles loose so you're much less likely to hurt yourself when you return to work.

● Don't overschedule your Mondays. Avoid setting important meetings or appointments for Monday morning. You'll feel far more refreshed and raring to go

HOLLYWOOD'S HOTTEST STARS ON THE BLOCK

STAR WARRIORS: Harrison Ford and Carrie Fisher are two of the top all-time box-office stars.

THAT'S SHOWBIZ

PRETTY POPULAR: Julia Roberts' movies have grossed nearly $2 billion.

HOLLYWOOD — Which star in Hollywood history has made the most profitable movies?

If you guessed Harrison Ford, you'd be right. The charismatic actor's films have grossed a combined $3.2 billion, according to popular the Web site themovietimes.com.

And the number one actress on the list is Julia Roberts, with a combined take of $1.4 billion for popular films like Pretty Woman and Erin Brockovich.

Roberts is actually the only woman in the top ten if you count male and female stars together — she places at number 10.

Here's a look at the top five men and the top five women in showbiz history based on U.S. box office gross.

TOP 5 ACTORS

1) Harrison Ford: His Star Wars and Indiana Jones movies are among the biggest hits of all time — and rumor has it he's planning a fourth Indy flick.

2) Samuel L. Jackson: His appearances as Jedi Knight Mace Windu in the first two Star Wars prequels have boosted this dependable actor way up on the list.

3) Tom Hanks: Hanks has consistently made hit movies, but starring in the $280 million-grossing Toy Story 2 helped him blast way over the top.

4) Eddie Murphy: Three Beverly Hills Cop flicks, two Dr. Dolittles, and two Nutty Professors — not to mention two Shrek — Eddie truly is the king of the sequel sequels.

5) Mel Gibson: Mel blazed his way through four Lethal Weapon flicks and three Mad Maxes, and the Road Warrior will soon ride again.

TOP 5 ACTRESSES

1) Julia Roberts: She hasn't made a sequel yet, but Julia has more movies grossing over $100 million than any other actress. Runaway Bride, Ocean's Eleven, My Best Friend's Wedding — and the hits just keep on coming.

2) Carrie Fisher: Carrie's writing great praise as a writer these days, but she'll never be forgotten for her role as Princess Leia in the first three Star Wars flicks, which collectively grossed over 1 billion dollars.

3) Whoopi Goldberg: Her biggest hits were Ghost and the two Sister Act movies, but Whoopi has consistently added to films since 1982.

4) Kathy Bates: Sometimes, all it takes is one monster hit to help a star float above the rest. In Kathy's case, it was her appearance in Titanic, the highest grossing film of all time with a take of $600 million.

5) Drew Barrymore: Her first major role was in E.T., which held the title of "Highest Grossing Film of All Time" — until Titanic came along. Expect Drew to move up the list after more blockbusters like Charlie's Angels 2 hit the theaters.

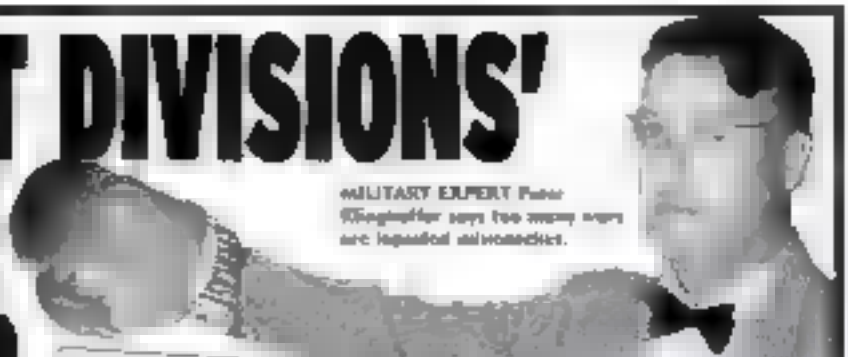
NEW 'WEIGHT DIVISIONS' COULD MAKE WARS FAIRER

— wacky professor argues



MILITARY EXPERT Peter Klinghoffer says too many wars are regarded as unscientific.

By MICHAEL FORSYTH

GENEVA — A maverick military expert has put forward a way-out new proposal to make future wars fairer — by establishing "weight divisions" for nations just as in professional boxing!

Heavyweight contenders with large nuclear warheads and vast armies like the United States, Russia and China would be able to do battle only with equals, either small or [illegible]

[illegible] lightweight countries like England, Israel or South Korea or light middleweights like Cuba, Nigeria or Denmark, according to the out-of-the-box thinking plan suggested in a recent article by Swiss military historian Peter Klinghoffer.

[illegible] Klinghoffer.

"When the United States goes to war against a tiny island like Grenada, it has become a joke like Queensberry rules boxing. The result is a foregone conclusion — in fact, the bigger power can end up looking like a professional bully.

"The system I'm proposing will make wars more equitable."

The most exciting wars in history have been between equally matched opponents, notes the professor, citing World War II which pitted the Allies against the Soviet Union.

"A war between the United States and China, for example, would be a very even one, very worth watching," he points out.

The heavy plan now calls for a total of eight divisions including two — middle- for Luxembourg, Liechtenstein and Malta on one, while small countries like Switzerland, Sweden and Finland would form their own division for neutrals.

The United Nations would supervise the weight classifications, and could be called upon to impose sanctions against countries found guilty of [illegible] outside its proper [illegible] explains.

But it looks like the proposal is dead in the water right now. Although U.S. officials say any such system would tie America's hands in international affairs, overall the whole idea is laughable.

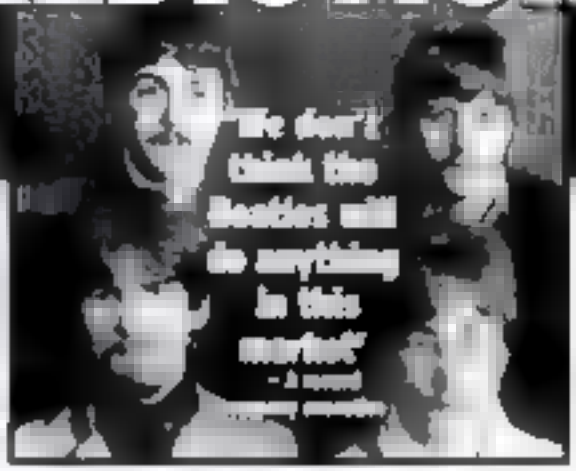
"It's absurd. America would be concerned about going to war with virtually every country in the world," Russian Department of Defence official.

"What's more to the point, that will have also FOR against a smaller country are somehow less heroic or a step on the [illegible] America's efforts to succeed in Grenada, Panama and in Operation Iraqi Freedom.

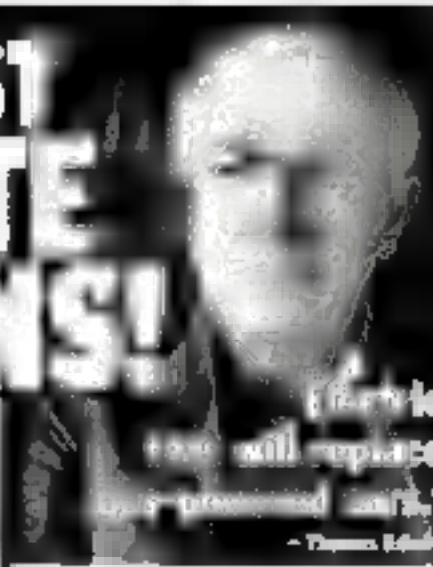
"The fact is the greater countries are sometimes even more dangerous, like a little guy who picks a fight with a big guy and ends up getting his head kicked in," argues Klinghoffer.

WORLD'S MOST INACCURATE PREDICTIONS!

"Man will not fly for 50 years."



"We don't think the Beatles will be anything in this market."



Electric cars will replace gas-powered cars."

In the year 1901, Wilbur Wright turned to his brother and said, "Man will not fly for 50 years." How wrong he was — for brother Orville DID fly only two years later. It is not easy predicting the future — and many "experts" have been proved wrong in their steadfast pronouncements.

Consider these wrong-headed predictions that have turned out to be wrong:

● Thomas Edison in 1910 predicted: "The radio front factory will put the gramophone and sheet of newspaper and in twenty more electricity will be so cheap that no light

● Darryl F. Zanuck in the 1950's envisioned that television would be a novelty that would fade within the first six months as people will soon get tired of staring into a box at night.

● Albert Einstein, consulting engineer for the Atomic Corp., in 1946: "Rockets will be the weapon of the air. We can visualize a future where planes leaving Los Angeles Field bound for Chicago will be in the air over Kansas by 1950."

● A record company executive turning down the Beatles in 1962: "We don't think they will do anything in the market. Guitar groups are on the way out."

PARANOID DICTATOR KIM JONG IL ORDERS GOON SQUAD TO SEIZE ALL NEWBORN TRIPLETS!

By MIKE FOSTER/Weekly World News

PYONGYANG, North Korea — In a shockingly cruel campaign, all triplets in this Communist country are now being rounded up right after birth by secret-police goons on the orders of crazed dictator Kim Jong Il — because he has an irrational fear that a member of such a trio will one day overthrow him!

The number three is considered lucky in North Korea and tradition has it that triplets are destined to rise to positions of power. That's why paranoid superstitious Kim is having all of them forcibly taken away from their parents and dumped into distant state-run orphanages where their development can be carefully monitored and controlled.

Officially the purpose of the kidnapping — to help poor parents who can't afford to feed an unexpected arrival — is kind. But diplomats confirm the explanation is bogus. Many triplets born to wealthy and high-ranking officials are also being snatched.

There is no doubt that the order is sweeping and universal," one Western diplomat told London's Daily Telegraph.

It may be officially atheistic and stalinist, but North Korea essentially operates a state religion infused with superstition, astrology and a personality cult that glorifies him as a unique national TRIPLE THREAT: Sons of triplets are being snatched from their mothers by henchmen soldiers Kim Jong Il, top, with his military advisers, who fears one of the newborn babies is destined to replace him.

GIVE THE BRITISH BACK THEIR EMPIRE

My America

BY ED ANGER

. . . they bloody well earned it, says Ed!

Ed Anger's on the road!

America's most outrageous newspaper columnist has decided to take a second look at "his America" up close, so he's packed wife Thelma Jean and his rusty trusty typewriter into his brand new motor home on a three month "My America" tour.

This column was mailed to us from Atlanta!

I'm madder than Prince Charles on a one-legged polo pony at all my flag-waving buddies who keep crowing about how "America" whipped the pants off sad sack Saddam in this war!

ALLIES FOREVER George Bush and Tony Blair made a great team during Operation Iraqi Freedom. Now Ed Anger feels it's time for the U.S. to help England get back all the colonies it once owned

It was a Coalition that liberated Iraq, goldurnit! And the only other country in it was our true friends the English — the one nation in the world we can count on in a crunch!

That's why I say it's high time we rewarded our most trusted ally by giving the British back their Empire!

You heard me right, buckaroos. Let's return every one of those lovable, making Third World former colonies back to their rightful ruler!

When queen Victoria was in charge there were no beards, bongo bins, secessionists and other natives kept in line but didn't hear about India and Pakistan trying to make each other glow!

And the Chinese spent their time supply wrecking tourists instead of exploiting them to make a deal for the latest American that Chinese bat Robert Mugabe's Zimbabwe. There's been so much civil war in Indochina it's a wonder it's not a parking lot!

The problem is that all these corrupt ruling empires and bloodthirsty dictators got independent before the British got through with them!

Trust me when I say the English are those fledgling countries best friend. Who up in arms Parliament will talk us years as that Hugh Grant will don't spend their time playing cricket and making silly accents are pending. He's always shrunk because instead of plotting their next conquest!

Now, the Brits get their empire back. They'll have control of supply, just like in the Jane Austen novels like Emma.

And they'll even have nice countries like Jamaica to go to work on their pale complexions.

Best of all with the British Empire back in business, America will have another loyal ally superpower to help us keep the world safe for capitalism!

We should never let the sun set on the British Empire again, folks.

Especially since the good ol' U.S. of A. controls that whole dirt business anyway.

WORLD'S SMARTEST DOG SURFS THE NET!

Weekly World News

EXTREMELY INTELLIGENT dog known as "Biff" has amazed animal behavioral experts with his computer literacy

ST. LOUIS — Brainy Biff the dog is the world's most computer-literate canine — his master has taught him how to use the Internet!

While other pooches are out chasing cats and burying bones in the backyard, the [redacted] son of cyberspace spends his time cruising the Net.

CAROL WESTCLOTT

"Biff likes to look at images of other dogs and nature scenes most," says his proud owner Carol Westclott. "He loves to go to sites where dogs are shown hunting in the backwoods, rescuing avalanche victims or retrieving ponteils. I guess he gets a vicarious thrill from going all kinds of places he'll probably never get to see in real life.

"Biff really has become addicted to the Net. He'll spend five or six hours a day online — and if I try to get on the computer before he's ready to get off he'll snarl at me to 'back off!'"

The talented tail-wagger uses his paw to control the mouse and his snout to peck at keys like "enter" when necessary as well as the power button.

"Most people who watch him get freaked out," Carol reveals. "He can't really read, of course, but he definitely can recognize certain icons. Whenever he sees the 'You've got mail' icon and knows one of my friends has e-mailed him a picture, he gets excited and starts barking."

Carol taught Biff, now 3, to use the Net when he was still a puppy.

"When I was online, he would come trotting up and stare at the screen — and if I happened to be looking up information on dogs, he would bark happily and wag his tail," reveals Carol, a 32-year-old, divorced marketing director. "I figured, why not try to show him how to use the Net?"

In addition to checking [redacted]-related sites, Biff is also a regular visitor to Web sites featuring bicycles, small animals and pastimes — all of which he's fond of chasing off-line.

Man builds island paradise made with 250,000 plastic bottles!

FANTASTIC PLASTIC Richie Sowa created his own floating island out of 250,000 empty soda bottles, which he borrowed off passersby in nearby Cancun.

CANCUN, Mexico — Lucky Richie Sowa lives on his very own private island — made up of 250,000 plastic bottles! Measuring 66-feet by 54-feet and dubbed Spiral Island, the enormous raft floats just south of Cancun.

The 49-year-old former carpenter from Middlesbrough, England spent four years building his amazing tropical paradise, using bottles he got from passersby on the mainland. And the real-life Robinson Crusoe's accommodations are far from Spartan.

His home, which has walls made from palm trees, boasts a large living area, two bedrooms and a kitchen. He's even planted mangroves — trees that grow roots underwater and provide a kind of natural air conditioning to the sea-swept kingdom. The roots also secure Spiral Island so that it doesn't drift!

Spiral Island floats in a lagoon near an exclusive resort called Puerto Aventuras — and its residents have been wowing what even the lucky-lucky guests don't have: a realm of their own.

The intrepid Englishman is the only inhabitant of the island — and he plans to keep it that way. He declined to escape the rat race and say goodbye to society forever after his second marriage went kaput.

ARE YOU LOSING YOUR HAIR?

The biological effects of combined herbal oral and topical formulations on androgenetic alopecia. Collective effort of The Hair & Skin Treatment Center in combination with The New York Hair Clinic.

ABSTRACT

The information presented here provides evidence of the effectiveness, safety and the high degree of success achieved with this revolutionary modality. Results may occur as early as 2 months. This therapeutic approach represents advanced treatment in the management of androgenetic alopecia (hair loss).

HERBAL ORAL CAPSULE

Testosterone is a naturally occurring sex hormone (androgen), normally produced, mainly by the male testis with a small contribution from the adrenal glands in both men and women. For this reason it is found in higher concentrations in men as compared to women. It is the compound responsible for the male sex characteristics as opposed to estrogen and progesterone. Through very complex biochemical pathways in the body, testosterone undergoes a series of transformations. This results in various compounds, each with a different physiologic function in the body other than the original hormone. One of the main compounds produced is dihydrotestosterone, also known as DHT.

Accumulation of DHT within the hair follicle is considered to be the hormonal mediator of hair loss through its direct action on the androgenic receptors in human scalp tissue. Through an unknown mechanism, DHT appears to interrupt the normal physiologic environment and function of the hair follicles in the scalp, resulting in the alteration of the general metabolism (normal hairgrowth).

The final outcome of this interaction ranges from the partial destruction to the complete obliteration of hair follicles, resulting in an increase dropout in the number of functional hair follicles.

As used in the WWECOR system the organic extract of the herbal formulation acts at the level of the cytosolic androgenic receptor at the scalp in a direct competitive manner with DHT. It works as a natural antiandrogenic blocker by inhibiting the active binding of DHT to the hair follicle receptor thereby modulating its effects and decreasing the amount of follicle damage and hair loss.

TOPICAL FORMULATION

Our Phesetans Topical Formula is used at the affected sights twice daily on a regular basis.

RESULTS

The overall outcome of this system has proved to be an extremely beneficial treatment approach in the management of androgenic alopecia (hair loss). There was a significant decrease in the rate of hair loss and increase in regrowth noted. A dramatic decrease in the rate of excessive hair loss and balding was noted in most persons after 1-2 months of treatment. Actual regrowth of hair was usually seen on the average starting within 3-4 months.

CHINA BANS BEAN TURDS

BEIJING — There soon won't be any more "fried liver" in Red China. Chinese tourism officials are launching a campaign to stamp out the mangled English and frequent misspellings on menus and public signs.

Signs in Beijing are notorious for featuring poor — and sometimes hilarious — translations of Chinese into English.

For example, you're likely to see "Collecting money toilet" on a pay toilet, or "To take notice of safe, the slippery are very cruel" or a "Slippery when wet" sign.

Menus are also full of embarrassing boners. Listings like "bean turd" instead of bean pie are a common sight.

Officials hope to correct all that with a six-month campaign focusing on 49 popular tourist spots, according to China Daily.

Weekly World News exclusive: The WORLD'S BIGGEST CROSSWORD!

REAL-LIFE BATMAN SPOILS ATM ROBBERY

THIS EXCLUSIVE image, taken from an ATM surveillance camera, shows a real-life superhero foiling a would-be thief.

Caught on tape: Masked man beats up bad guy and saves damsel in distress

LONDON — A crime-hating vigilante dressed as the comic-book hero Batman was caught on a bank surveillance camera saving a young girl from a vicious mugger!

"I was taking some cash out of the ATM when the robber stuck a gun in my back and made me give him all my money," says 19-year-old Sally Lopez, a student.

Sally Lopez: "I was terrified. I thought he was going to kill me for sure."

"But then this guy [illegible] dressed up like Batman came out of the shadows and ordered the attacker to let me go!"

The crook took a wild shot at the caped crusader and [illegible] fled. "I guess he wasn't expecting Batman to appear," Sally [illegible].

[illegible] dressed up like Batman [illegible] turning them in to take him in. He was [illegible] to reach.

Unfortunately, Batman took off before I could thank him. He seemed [illegible].

Sally's rescue is just one of several astounding crime stories [illegible] Caped Crusader [illegible].

[illegible] wonder police [illegible] they're grateful for the help.

Masked adventure people taking the law into their own hands, but [illegible] has been extremely helpful in capturing all kinds of crooks," says an appreciative police [illegible].

"But [illegible] when it comes to [illegible] nals. As a result, many of London's most crime-ridden neighborhoods are now safe to walk again."

Since the Dark Knight doppelganger's first appearance six months ago, police have credited him with:

● Leading them to the hideout of a murderous East London drug cartel.

● Stopping more than a dozen muggings.

● Apprehending three knife-wielding thieves who had terrorized London's suburbs for more than two years.

Guessing the true identity of the masked mystery man has become the latest rage in England. Many believe he's a frustrated cop who has decided to work outside the system.

Others speculate he's a crook who's gone straight to make amends for his violent past. And some think he's a nut job who actually believes he's Batman.

"I don't know who this guy is, but I'd sure like to shake his hand," says the anonymous London cop.

"He's done more to bring down the crime rate here than any other individual in recent memory. I can't say I approve of all of his tactics, but he's getting the job done."

Like the Batman of comic-book fame, the real-life Caped Crusader wears a special utility belt in which he keeps such things as rope, handcuffs, a stun gun and business cards reading "Another Criminal Stopped By Batman!" which he leaves next to every crook he captures.

The masked crime-fighter is also believed to be wearing Kevlar body armor because at least two desperate criminals have shot at him point-blank — with no effect at all.

Despite Batman's success, not everyone is pleased to have a costumed vigilante prowling the streets.

"This guy is dangerous," warns Ian Arthur-Jones, a retired London detective who has petitioned local authorities to bring the Batman wannabe to justice.

"His interference [illegible] It's just a matter of time before he or someone else gets hurt or killed because of his antics. Worse, he's setting a horrible example for the children. The police should be the

ANCIENT EGYPTIANS INVENTED BASEBALL

CHARLESTON, S.C. — Baseball — long considered strictly an American invention — was actually played by the Egyptians more than 4,000 years ago!

That's the claim of Peter A. Piastowe, a professor of comparative ancient history at the College of Charleston whose translation of a wall relief at the shrine of Hathor in Egypt suggests that the ancient pharaohs played a primitive game very similar to baseball.

According to Piastowe, the first pharaoh to depict himself playing the game — more a ritualistic ritual than a sport — was Thutmose III, who ruled Egypt during the 15th century B.C. In one picture, Thutmose is shown holding a ball in one hand and a long stick in the other.

The professor did admit, however, that aside from the use of a ball and bat, the ancient Egyptian version of baseball was considerably different than today's version of the sport.

TOUCAN PLAY AT THAT GAME!

Billy the parakeet and Dolly the toucan started out as neighbors, but now these two "sweet-hearts" get along like birds of a feather! When Billy's owner, Judy Mills, went on vacation, she left her little birdie with her neighbor, Colin Moody, who had a toucan. Moody, 58, says, "Toucans like to be left alone and don't like to be disturbed, but Dolly actually likes to have Billy around." The two birds have grown so close, Dolly never tells the little parakeet to "Get off my beak!"

DEAD OR ALIVE?

This week:

THE WHO!

These legendary rock 'n' rollers started wowing audiences in 1963 with eye-catching live concerts. They cemented their bad-boy image and gained notoriety by smashing equipment onstage and trashing hotel rooms wherever they went.

These singing sensations are what legends are made of. Can you tell who's still living and who's not? (Answers below.)

Clockwise from top left: Bass player JOHN ENTWISTLE (a.k.a. Ox) who once claimed to be the greatest rock bass player living, also played the French horn. Guitarist PETE TOWNSHEND changed the face of rock 'n' roll when he wrote the rock opera Tommy. Lead singer ROGER DALTREY is credited with starting the Who and also starred as the lead in the film version of Tommy. Drummer KEITH MOON was responsible for the band being banned for life from every Holiday Inn.

Baghdad Bob is at it again!

'I AM NOT DEAD!'

IRAQI Information Minister's bizarre press conferences had many news junkies wondering what war he was commenting on.

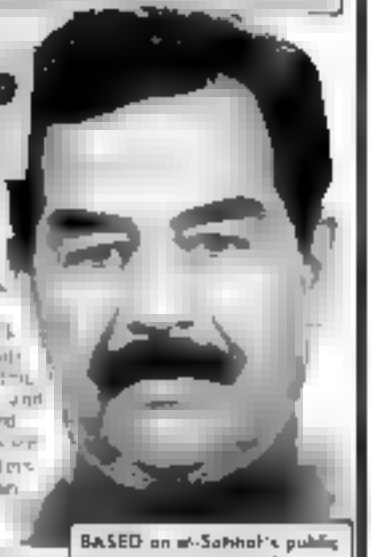
Wacky Iraqi also sez:

'We've kicked the infidels out!'

'Saddam Hussein is 'still in charge!'

'Iraq has conquered N.Y., Chicago & Miami'

'Iraq is poised to invade Texas!'



BASED on al-Sahhaf's public statements, one could conclude that Saddam's mistress has hobbled off on his Minister of Information.

BAGHDAD — The Iraqi Minister of Information whose absurd lies about the war made him a laughingstock has taken denial to a macabre new level: He's angrily insisting that he's not dead!

Iranian newspapers have reported that Mohammed Saeed al-Sahhaf — who once [illegible] optimistic assessments of Saddam's war effort long after Coalition troops [illegible] — was killed [illegible] shortly after the regime fell.

But a man claiming to be the diehard propagandist chief called a Baghdad radio station to declare that he's alive and fighting mad.

Reports that Iraq's dead spin wizard is thinking on the part of the criminal death and his pugnacious on the U.S. invaders, al-Sahhaf blasted. "These silly [illegible] propaganda."

What's more, he never says the spokesman went on to argue not only that Coalition forces had been defeated but that the triumphant Iraqi Republican Guard is on the verge of conquering America.

The Iraqi military has the United States of America entirely surrounded," al-Sahhaf maintained in the rambling [illegible] phone interview. "Now we shall begin to lighten the [illegible]

Early in Operation Iraqi Freedom, al-Sahhaf did a remarkable job spinning every [illegible] event to paint Saddam's military in the best possible light. But as the war progressed, the Iraqis became increasingly out of sync with the reality seen on millions of TV sets around the world. As it came clear that the statesman had a more stable career ahead as a lost in a faraway world.

Here are some of al-Sahhaf's most preposterous new assertions:

● Not a single U.S. soldier is currently in Iraq and all the invaders have been expelled by our heroic fighting men.

● Saddam Hussein is actually in charge and is adored by the Iraqi people.

● Units of Iraqi soldiers [illegible] In reality, at least 2 [illegible] soldiers have been killed.

● Iraqi troops have entered seven American cities, including New York, Los Angeles and Miami and are close to liberating the oppressed inhabitants.

● Iraqi battleships are in Lake Manhasset and Lake Erie, poised to attack.

● The Iraqi Air Force can [illegible] the skies over the Eastern seaboard of the U.S.

● Longshoremen unions of the Iraqi military have slammed Washington.

● A [illegible] Iraqi [illegible] is [illegible] [illegible] prepared to [illegible] Western [illegible] Texas.

● Vice President Dick Cheney has been [illegible] Lynd. He is [illegible] with Iraqi authorities and [illegible] on a canary bird.

● Washington [illegible] is [illegible] by Iraqi fighters and [illegible] American [illegible] are [illegible] in droves.

● Most [illegible] of al-Sahhaf's Santa Claus has been taken prisoner and will be put on trial for war crimes.

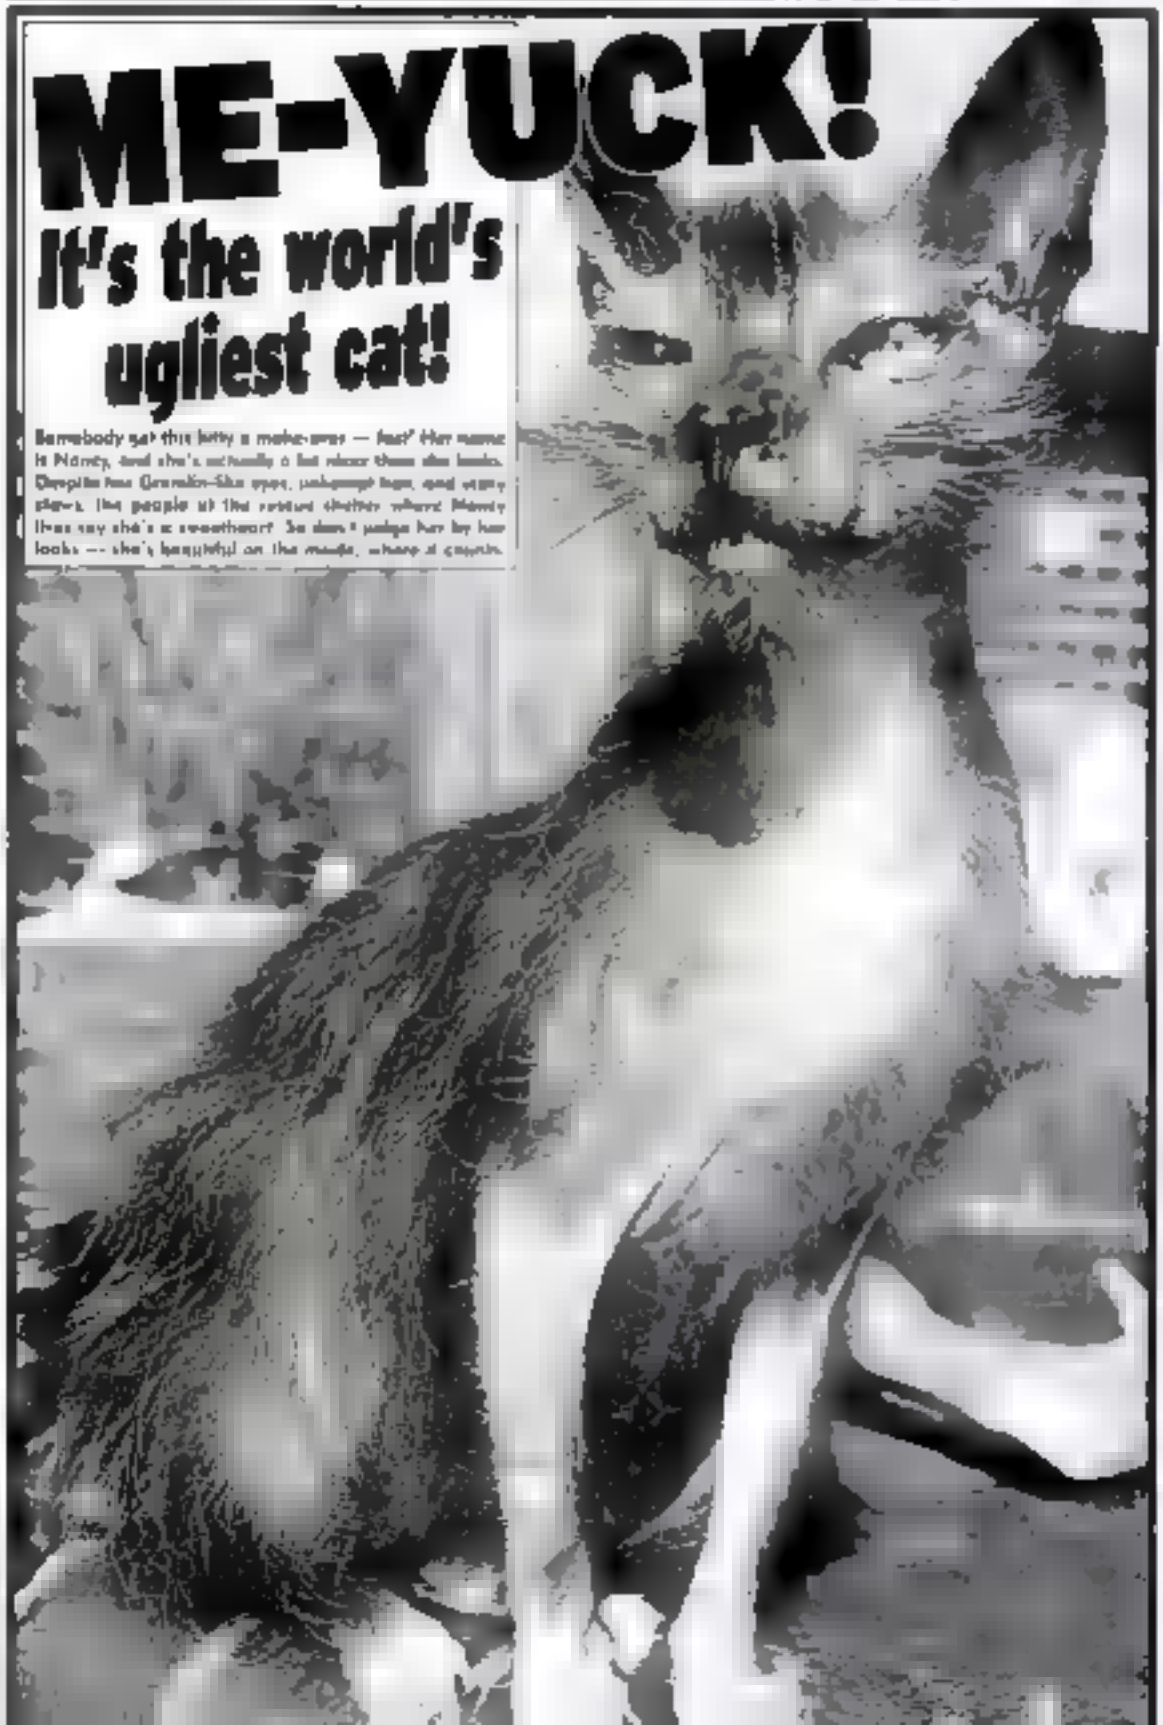
It's the world's ugliest cat!

Somebody sat this kitty a make-over — fast! Her name is Mandy, and she's actually a lot nicer than she looks. So don't judge her by her looks — she's beautiful on the inside, where it counts.



Perfume makes sperm swim faster!

BAD'HI U, Germany — Gals who are eager to get pregnant may be able to boost their odds of conceiving by splashing on Lily of the Valley perfume before making whoopee, amazed scientists have learned.

It turns out that human sperm becomes excited when exposed to the popular scent — the little swimmers double their speed and hunt down the aroma, says biology professor Hans Hoff of Hahn University who helmed the three-year study.

The researchers says that the startling discovery about sperm's fragrance preference could help scientists craft out a new method to overcome infertility.

"This is the first time sperm has been shown to respond to smell," declares professor Hoff. "The application of the substance to the vagina area could raise the chance of conceiving."

He discovered a way to break into the machines' supposedly tamperproof money boxes, and periodically stashed stacks of cash into his pants while his back was turned to security cameras.

Draper stashed some of the stash and was arrested

Help the Vatican name a patron saint of the Internet

. . . to protect the world from evil online!

BOCA RATON — There's evil on the Internet, but don't worry — the Vatican will soon be naming a patron saint to protect those who surf the worldwide web. Insiders say Archangel Gabriel is the odds-on favorite to receive the honor.

The Vatican already has beatified St. Columbanus as the patron saint of motorcyclists and St. Clare of Assisi as the patron saint of television, so it's about time the Internet got a patron saint, too.

But Archangel Gabriel? Maybe you know someone better!

Here's your chance to make your voice heard. Vote for one of the candidates Weekly World News has selected, or write in a choice of your own.

Your vote along with thousands of others will be mailed to the Vatican before the Pope names the patron saint. So don't delay!

'WEAR YOUR THONG

2nd annual tradition will have 200,000 Americans baring their bottoms on May 23!

Sorry gals, but our lawyers made us cover up some of the revealing rumps!

THESE gals had to work on 'Wear Your Thong To Work Day last year — but they weren't licensed. Their bosses relented then — and even encouraged them — to support the fun

As many as 200,000 eye-popping secretaries, interns and office assistants are expected to bare their bottoms in our 2nd Annual Wear Your Thong to Work Day on May 23 — but here's the clincher:

That number could get even bigger because, this year, ugly gals, men and even bosses of both sexes have been invited to participate, too.

"It's going to be big," chortled Weekly World News Editor-in-Chief Dick Kulpa, who along with ace reporter Nick Mann masterminded the event that drew an estimated 70,000 "thongers" to 361 workplaces in all 50 states in 2001.

"We're looking for a massive turnout far exceeding last year's group. Our first Weekly World News Thong Day was limited to attractive women with well-proportioned bosoms and lots of 'tush power' — a good idea but it turned out to be impossible to enforce," says Kulpa.

"So this year we're blowing the lid off all restrictions and flinging open the floodgates, inviting everyone to catch the Weekly World News wave and join the fun.

"Ugly women, men of all shapes and sizes, even 'out of trim' supervisors and business owners who are up in years and past their prime — we're willing to take all comers.

"And one of the great things about Weekly World News Thong Day is that it doesn't cost a dime to participate. All you have to do is slip into a thong that won't get you arrested, grab your briefcase and head out for work.

"To make sure you aren't mistaken as a crazy person or a hooker, we advise you to pin the Official Weekly World News Wear Your Thong to Work Day ID card — with it's distinctive Rat Boy logo — to the back of your thong, where it won't be overlooked.

"This really is one of the few rites of spring that you can enjoy with less effort than it takes to put on your clothes in the morning.

"And if you're the least bit lonely or in the market for a new sweetie, it's a dang good way to get a date."

Surprisingly to some, Weekly World News' First Annual Wear Your Thong to Work Day was well received in all but a handful of church offices, hospital emergency rooms, and public schools that enforce strict dress codes.

There were no other reported problems anywhere in the United States, Kulpa says.

"In fact, one of the gals who wore a thong to work in a restaurant last year was discovered by a Hollywood producer. So you never know what can happen when you take part in a fun day like this.

BUFFY isn't the least bit uncomfortable in wearing her thong to work — because the male staffers, like Chuck & Bruno, don the business bikinis, too!
